The scientific programme covers new developments and thought provoking subjects and includes seven keynote plenary lectures, a number of interactive debate sessions on contentious subjects, with five parallel streams covering all aspects of the specialty. ## ePosterGenius

ELECTRONIC POSTERS PRESENTATION DURING AND AFTER THE MEETING !!!

In this year's Symposium, posters will be presented electronically with the use of the innovative ePostersLive platform, for both its ease of use for the poster authors as well as its environmental friendliness.

Specifically, the meeting posters can be created either with the award-winning PosterGenius™ software application, which will be provided to the poster authors free-of-charge, or any other software the authors wish to use, i.e.: PowerPoint. Submission of the e-posters will take place over the Internet quickly and easily, with the click of a button for users of PosterGenius™, or through a few-step, user-friendly wizard for users of PowerPoint or alternative software.

With the ePostersLive platform, no printing, carrying and hanging of posters will be needed. The e-posters will be presented in the meeting foyer in two ways: on a large number of desktop computers where every participant will be able to search and review any poster, as well as on large, high-definition displays with time-scheduling, in replacement of the traditional poster boards.

Furthermore, following the increasing trend for making the scientific information freely available to the entire scientific community, e-posters will be also published online, through the Symposium website even after the end of the meeting.
